1. At location (N.175-595) a concrete machine gun emplacement capable of holding four men was constructed by soldiers in August 1951. A smaller machine gun emplacement was constructed near the cemetery of the village of Pilur (N.178-598).
2. There were blockhouses constructed of concrete and logs along the hills above the villages of Pilur, Ecmenik, Stropan and Baban. The blockhouses were spaced 300 to 500 meters apart.
3. Between Ecmenik and Stropan there were 10 machine gun emplacements, 5 made of concrete, and 5 underground and covered with logs. There were no soldiers stationed at the blockhouses, but the blockhouses were inspected occasionally.
4. Air Force First Lieutenant Amdi Mula, son of Osman, and Fuat Seov, an Army doctor, returned from the Soviet Union where they had been in training for four years. Both men are from Bilisht.
5. The military class of 1932 was inducted between 25 and 31 October 1951.
6. Reservists up to 40 years of age were being called individually for military service.
